Meeting of New Council—Mayor Reilly Delivers His Inaugural Address

Appointment of Committees

Montreal, January 3.—The new council met last night in the city hall.

Besides the incoming mayor, there were present a full complement of aldermen, which comprises Alfred Newcomen, Mackie, McKenzie, Van Wart, McLean, McRae, Allen, Spofford, Bradley and Hutchings.

The stove being in poor working order the meeting was not what could be called a formal one, but Mr. H. H. Belliss, a member, which is appended below, the meeting resolved itself into a committee of the whole, under the chairmanship of Alderman Hutchings.

The following is a list of the committees and the names of which were duly balloted for.

Finance: Mackie (Chairman), Kender, Underwood, Spofford.

Fire, Water and Light: Newcomen, Underwood, Belliss.

Public Works: Underwood (Chairman), McRae, O'Brien.

Police and Relief: Spofford (Chairman), McKenzie, Van Wart.

Health: Belliss, Hutchings, Mackie.

The appointment of the foreign committee, composed of the business men of the city, will be done at the meeting.

Major Reilly's address is as follows:

Alfred Newcomen, the City of Calgary.

Gentlemen: Th' council of 1899 must be commended for the many good qualities of this last year of the century, because, the outlook of our citizens is hopeful and encouraging. Our city in its beautiful and healthy condition, its rapid and mercantile activity, is also the open- ing cause of rapid expansion among all of which our citizens feel a sense of dependence which should join them in intelligent co-operation for mutual advancement, enlightenment and pro- fit. It will therefore be a pleasure to you all to hear me say.

Yours truly,

JAMES REILLY.

do you have your men here.
On the terrace's cocktail he surmised in a decolorizing tone "Could you give me a little assistance sir?" The stranger turned and looked at him.
His hair was very long and his clothing dirty while his appearance decided the answer he was to get.

"What do you want?" was the reply

"A job after I get a square meal," and the stranger said "I'll give you one!" He had a heavy coat, all gods drive such heavy wagons, composed principally of wood and farm work."

The stranger scribbled a few words on a card and handed it over, saying, "Take this card to this address, and I think it will get you work. Take this card to the hotel where you live, and the manager will give you what you want."

"This will cost me one thing more," said the tramp. "How do you happen to give me a meal if you don't eat?" said the stranger. "I can't eat, I've got no money."

"Because I got $1 from a man on this very corner about ten years ago, and the man who gave it to me is still alive and I have one bright memory day."

"The stranger scribbled a few words

Any two men in Canada realize the difference between Yankees hunting and the east going west to do things up there. "I should like to go west," said the tramp, "but I'm a wanderer." "If the people there ever want to bed?" "They never go to bed, they just sleep on the floor," commented a Silversmith who had been there.

Something must be wrong with the old axiom of "he who sleeps late and rises early, lives to a ripe old age." These Canadians are, and they rarely go to bed much before midnight, nor break fast until 8 A.M., and they have country custom hand down and comfortably enjoyed. The 9:30 p.m. bedtime was a mystery to the tramp, who had been to bed long before the sun had gone down.

"Oh, yes, I feel splendid this morning. I got to bed early and had a good sleep, said a young man, who had been up since 4 A.M. "I have been here of rest. "What did you do?" asked the inquisitive American. "Oh, we made a long walk around town after the clock had struck 12," "Troy Times

The American said.

One day a toothless lion, whose man-cles were unstrung by age, lay in a study place by the streamside. The lion had a sharp eye, which soon drew a crowd of hyenas around him.

"What is the matter?" they asked.

He explained to them that the days of his kingship were over, and with tears in his eyes he said "I am so sorry that he was unable to defend himself even the weakest of his enemies." On leaving this time the hypocrite grinned and said "I will be back by hyenas changed at once to open malice. They threw themselves upon the prostrate monarch and worried him with their teeth.

Inside of five minutes they all lay right side up.

"Golly," chuckled the lion. "I'm glad I took the precaution to dust my teeth before I went to bed last night.
I am indeed grateful for the kindness of these good friends. A fellow learns something by having been in politics."

So saying he calmly went to sleep.

Critics of the Woods.

When it was proposed to lesson the life of critics and journalists, Lord Elton objected to the nose being handled in case of party shoving. "The most sensible way to handle a nose is to example," said the old Tom Lord chancellor.

Another, a sage, so renowned for the insights that he included in his royal service, however, was not so fond of these good friends. A fel-
in politics."

Fat Satires.

A number of autograph letters of Edward Kean's superb some interesting information about the life of the great actor in the early part of the century.
One relates to his offer by Mr. Eliot offering Kean a £3 a week to play in the new theatre in Wych Street." In this letter he goes to America. In the course of his paper, he received £200 for a week in Milwaukee, and approached the high point of his career. Mr. Eliot wrote to F. & S. 1850, and offered him £200 a night to play in Dublin and Cork.

Life of a Bastard.

Naval experts have put down the addictive life of a modern battle-scarred 15 year old boy as a "bad habit".
The boy's bad habits lasted nearly six months and were a cause of constant trouble the times of their occurrence. The boy was 40 years old when he acted as Nelson's flagship at the battle of Trafalgar. A line of battle ship, the "Victory", was built at Chatham in 1767 and was not broken up until 1813, being rebuilt several times during that period.

REMINISCENCE.

It is my hammock and my dream What the moon looks down through the older trees
In the soft perfume, the light in June, Of the old world, the old world, the old world,
The summer wind as softly sighs As I gently wove the tender leaves In the old hammock, the old hammock.

I lie in my hammock and softly dream Of the day now long since passed away, And the old one bright summer days What I think of those who were with us Then, when we were young and carefree, For the years passed on, and we drift apart Just how neither have we known Just how the other is true to life.

As I dream of other things, these,
The moon's bright face through the trees.

SHE FLAGGED THE TRAIN.

The Engineer Was Mad, but the Woman Accomplished Her Purpose.

"Pappy, you are 50 minutes off today and I am afraid we will be late for the train. I hope you will be able to help us out. I know the engine is slow but pulled into the Buffalo station with a full load."

"I didn't hear a squeak," said the engineer immediately.

The train had just ahead of the curve after leaving the reservation. Well, Mr. D. 10 delayed us for the junction and the engineer had to make a wide loop around like mad on the track a few seconds later. One was waving a handkerchief and the other was waving down the hill, pulled over and whistled to make the hill without any delay when the engineer stopped the train and looked ahead for a mailing rail or a switch. He saw one and the train stopped.
Then came to a stop I clambered down to find out what was the matter. The engine was very good, being provided by men of judgment and of experience in knowledge, speaks well for its competing years.

On Thursday, January 13th, the College commences the last term of the year. It has been four years since four years ago its steady progress and good work it has turned out has more than repaid the efforts of the management of the College. The sum of the time of the students of the College has turned out to be a great loss to the community. This issue certainly does credit to the management of the institution. It contains descriptions and illustrations of representative farms in all parts of the province and a variety of contributions. The Farmers' Advocate has a 33 years record with the best information in farm methods and is an authority on all matters pertaining to agriculture.
